

Healing retreat for teens infused with fun

Carolyn Scofield

cscofiel@tulane.edu

Tulane University School of Medicine hosted a week-long camp for teens and young adults with bleeding disorders.

Tulane University welcomed more than a dozen teens with hemophilia for the 2018 Tidal Wave Transition Retreat. The summer camp is designed to teach young men how to manage their bleeding disorders while living a full life, with an emphasis on transitioning from pediatric to adult medicine. Dr. Tammueella Singleton, associate director of the Hemophilia Treatment Center at Tulane School of Medicine, led the week-long retreat.