

Tulane Participates in 'All of Us' - Local Study Seeks Your DNA

Meg Farris, Medical Reporter, WWLTV 4

Science is now beginning to understand that everything, from sickness, health, and even weight loss, is determined by your genetics and your environment, and how the two interact.

The National Institutes of Health is looking for more than a million people to help researchers target treatments just for you. Read more.

"Instead of giving everybody the same medicine, we give the right medicine to the right person,"

Dr. Vivian Fonseca, Chief of Endocrinology at Tulane School of Medicine