

The gold standard: Nobel Prize gifted to Tulane University by Dr. Andrew Schally

Andrew Yawn

ayawn@tulane.edu

February 15, 2024 10:56 AM

Dr. Andrew Schally, a researcher at Tulane University from 1962-2005, has donated his 1977 Nobel Prize to Tulane University with the hope of inspiring the next generation of researchers. (Photo by Sabree Hill)

Forty-seven years after endocrinologist Dr. Andrew Schally was awarded the Nobel Prize for medical research conducted at Tulane University, the prestigious award is returning home.

A researcher at Tulane and the New Orleans VA Medical Center from 1962-2005, Schally donated his Nobel Prize to Tulane University School of Medicine, where it will soon be put on display to inspire the next generation of researchers to reach for similar heights. Read the full story here.