

BIO from the BAYOU Drops Podcasts for BioEurope: Entrepreneurship & Infusing Industry Perspectives into Academia

SOM Communications

somcommunications@tulane.edu

March 24, 2024 8:00 PM

Upcoming episodes of the BIO from the BAYOU podcast feature Elaine Hamm, PhD, and Nicholas Pashos, PhD.

Along with the vibrant discussions and knowledge exchange at BioEurope Spring 2024, the BIO from the BAYOU podcast announced the release of two new episodes. These latest additions are set to enrich the biotech community's insights into entrepreneurship and multi-faceted leadership in the sector. James Zanewicz, JD,LLM, RTTP, Chief Strategy Officer of the School of Medicine and one of the BIO from the BAYOU creators, shared his enthusiasm, "As we gathered at BioEurope Spring in Barcelona, it was a prime time to unveil our newest episodes, offering profound narratives that resonate with the challenges and triumphs of biotech leadership and entrepreneurship."

Episode 29: Entrepreneur in Residence - Nick Pashos, PhD

In this compelling installment, Nick Pashos, PhD, founder and CEO of BioAesthetics and the Tulane School of Medicine's Entrepreneur in Residence, delves into the intricate journey of transitioning from academic research to the entrepreneurial world. Pashos, a seasoned startup founder, shares valuable insights on how to overcome the hurdles that academic entrepreneurs commonly face. Through his narrative, listeners will gain a deeper understanding of the support mechanisms vital for budding startups and how he engages as part of them, especially those emerging from academic settings. The episode, hosted by the insightful Elaine Hamm, PhD, promises a treasure trove of advice for those navigating the startup ecosystem.

Episode 30: One Woman, Many Hats! A Day in the Life of Elaine Hamm, PhD

Switching perspectives, the subsequent episode shines a spotlight on Elaine Hamm, PhD, whose roles extend beyond being the Executive in Residence at Tulane School of Medicine. Hamm, a paragon of entrepreneurial diversity, discusses her involvement in various startups and her ventures in different sectors of Biotech, as well as a unique wine bar initiative. Her story is a testament to effective multitasking and strategic planning in managing multiple entrepreneurial endeavors. Hosted by James Zanewicz, JD, LL.M., RTTP, this episode explains tips to balance diverse projects without losing sight of one's goals.

These episodes not only build upon the legacy of BIO from the BAYOU's previous discussions on fostering biotech collaborations and innovation ecosystems but also offer a personal touch, showcasing the more human aspect of biotech entrepreneurship. As the biotech landscape continues to evolve, especially in the Gulf South region, these narratives provide inspiration and practical guidance for professionals at every stage of their career. Tune in to these episodes as you engage in follow-up discussions and post-conference networking from BioEurope Spring 2024, and imbue your entrepreneurial journey with the wisdom and experiences shared by our distinguished guests.