Sign for an emergency medical clinic set up at Harrah's Casino following Hurricane Katrina.

As a medical resident in Louisiana, Anjali Niyogi, MD, MPH, never thought she'd be racing through the flooded streets of New Orleans in a commandeered ambulance, searching for medical supplies to set up ad hoc clinics. Dr. Niyogi set up at least six makeshift clinics around the city, offering care to first responders, Latino immigrants who came in to clean up and rebuild, and anyone else who needed chronic or urgent care.
