

Tulane to Display Nobel Prize Awarded for Landmark Medical Research

Andrew Yawn

ayawn@tulane.edu

February 15, 2024 10:56 AM

Nearly five decades after winning the Nobel Prize for groundbreaking medical research conducted at Tulane, endocrinologist Dr. Andrew Schally has donated his 1977 Nobel Prize in Physiology or Medicine to the Tulane University School of Medicine. The award—recognizing discoveries that led to major advances in hormone therapy, prostate cancer treatment, and other fields—will be displayed on campus to inspire future generations of researchers and highlight Tulane’s enduring legacy of scientific innovation.

Read full article

Through a bold, unrelenting and lifelong pursuit of discovery and innovation Dr. Schally has improved lives around the globe and represented the very best of Tulane
President Michael A. Fitts