

Planning a CME Event? The Center for Continuing Education can help.

SOM Communications

somcommunications@tulane.edu

January 23, 2026 4:29 PM

William Wimley, PhD, the George A. Adrouny, PhD, Professor in Biochemistry in the Department of Biochemistry and Molecular Biology, gave a lecture approved for AMA PRA Category 1 Credit™.

Do you need CME credit for an upcoming meeting, or help planning a conference from start to finish?

The Tulane Center for Continuing Education \(CCE\) at Tulane University School of Medicine is a behind-the-scenes partner for departments and organizations looking to offer accredited continuing medical education or streamline meeting planning.

CCE supports everything from Grand Rounds and tumor boards to large national and international conferences, offering CME accreditation for live, online, and enduring programs. The team also provides flexible meeting and event support, whether you need help with a single component or full conference management.

From site selection and registration to marketing, audiovisual coordination, and post-meeting reporting, CCE helps ensure events run smoothly and meet accreditation requirements, so faculty and organizers can focus on the content.

Interested in learning more or requesting a cost estimate?

Contact Tulane CCE at 504-988-5466 or cme@tulane.edu.