Primary Research Areas

My scholarly endeavors focus on moving from multicultural competence to social justice change in counseling and psychology. I seek to understand the needs of historically marginalized groups and how counselors and psychologists may become effective social change agents. I integrate these themes into my research, teaching, and service in creative and innovative ways, involving graduate students and collaborating with grassroots community-based organizations and schools as community partners. My research agenda includes investigation of the following areas: transgender counseling and psychology, LGBTQ youth and adults, traumatology, Asian American/Pacific Islander counseling and psychology, multicultural and social justice competency, social justice and group work, and qualitative methodology.

Course Development

- (1) Introduction to Social Justice and Advocacy in P-16 Settings
- (2) Advanced Counseling Theory in P-16 Settings
- (3) Qualitative Research in P-16 Settings
- (4) Writing Seminar in Social Justice
- (5) Traumatology and Social Justice
