Tulane University School of Medicine Message from the Dean

4 February 2021

Many of our faculty, staff, residents and students have now received at least the first round of COVID vaccination.

However, it is very important that vaccination does not lead to a change in behavior or relaxing of precautions.

Although the vaccine limits the development of illness in most cases, it may still be possible to transmit the virus to others after vaccination. There are many people who have not yet been vaccinated, including those who live with elderly or high-risk family members and who can not risk becoming infected.
