Lagniappe

Tulane School of Medicine established the Elias S. Hanna Prize for Medicine in 2021. The Hanna Prize for Medicine will be awarded to a student, resident, current faculty member or an SOM Alum for their international humanitarian efforts in the past calendar year. Send in your nominations for the award by March 15. The nomination should be in written format, less than 500 words and include information about the achievements in international humanitarian efforts of the nominee. Email nominations to SOMAWards@tulane.edu.

Tulane students launch podcast to inspire open-heartedness in medicine

A new podcast produced by Tulane medical students explores what makes an open-hearted physician. The “Open-Hearted MD” features a lineup of rotating students and guest mentors, where the conversations will explore topics including mindfulness, gratitude and how to bring improvisation and humor into the medical practice. Also covered will be the difficult part of being a physician with topics such as death and dying and burnout. Find out how to listen here.
