The Royal College of Surgeons’
Definitive Surgical Trauma Skills (DSTS) Course
July 11th and 12th, 2019
Tulane School of Medicine, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA

Course Description: Taught over two days by skilled and knowledgeable international surgical faculty through interactive didactic discussions, case scenarios and practical workshops on un-embalmed cadavers, this course teaches participants how to manage a broad range of trauma conditions and perform life-saving damage control surgical procedures while under pressure in a trauma and emergency environment, as well as covering decision-making, epidemiology and emerging technologies. A textbook is provided prior to the course to augment learning, and online materials are available to course participants as well.

This course is suitable for the following participants who desire additional hands-on training in surgical care of trauma patients.
US participants: surgeons who have completed residency training, surgical fellows, and current mid-to-senior surgical residents
For UK participants: ST5-8, consultants and SAS grades

Course Fee $1,200
