Maraganore talks about better brain health

Dementia is on the rise worldwide, but advances in health care and healthier lifestyles mean the life expectancy of Americans is on the rise, too.

Dr. Demetri Maraganore, Chair of the Neurology Department and Herbert J. Harvey, Jr. Chair of Neurosciences, is working to make sure that as Americans advance in age, they do so in the best possible health. In this episode of the On Good Authority podcast, Dr. Maraganore explains how to improve brain health in order to make the most of the senior years. Listen here.
