
INSIDE TulaneMed

November 1, 2021

News

1. Dr. Paul Gladden talks about new role at School of Medicine
2. Tulane scientists unravel 50-year-old medical mystery behind toddlers' deaths from RSV vaccine
3. Researcher receives \$1.7 million grant to study faulty DNA repair and cancer risk
4. REMINDER: Complete your mandatory EDI Training by November 30
5. Save the date: 12th Annual Faculty Research Synergy Event scheduled for December

Tell us your news

Events of the Week

The Program in Medical Ethics and Human Values presents: Feminist Bioethics:

Communities of Care, Hierarchies of Knowledge. Tuesday, November 2 at noon. Register in advance here.

Deming Department of Medicine Grand Rounds presents: Celebrating 100 years of the Discovery of Insulin: Where are we today and Where are we going? Wednesday, November 3 at noon. On Zoom, Passcode: 364992

Submit your event

Lagniappe

The Tulane Medical Weight Loss Clinic has opened to anyone looking for a non-surgical option for weight loss. The clinic is run by Shauna Levy, MD, MS, an Assistant Professor of Surgery and a board certified obesity medicine specialist. It includes nutrition counseling with a registered dietitian at each visit. Medical conditions or medications that are contributing to obesity will be reviewed. For more information, call (504) 988-5110.

In his own words: Dr. Paul Gladden talks about his new role

"I've always been drawn toward a challenge and toward people in need. Before becoming an orthopedic trauma surgeon, I spent decades as a first responder. Sadly, I have seen many people at their worst and have always worked my hardest to get them better."

Read more about what brought Dr. Gladden to Tulane and his plans for the future here.