Alvarado named Health Disparities Research Institute Scholar

Flor Alvarado, MD, MHS, MPH, assistant professor of Nephrology and Hypertension, has been named a 2022 Health Disparities Research Institute scholar. The program is part of the National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (NIMHD) and is designed to help prepare junior investigators who want to become independent researchers.

“As a health disparities researcher, I have the opportunity to make changes locally, nationally, and even globally,” said Alvarado. Read more here.
